1. Question Submitted: Hi, I'm doing a research paper on how certain types of music can play a role in the development of a baby's mental and cognitive learning processes both in utero and during the first year of life. That said, here's the search info I came up with: (bab* or infant*) and music and (brain or develop*). I've tried different variations, and this seemed to produce the best results, but I feel there's still more information focusing in on the specific area I'm looking for than I've found so far. Any suggestions? Thanks so much for your help. [Provide at least 3 strategies] Name: Florence

Hi Florence,

Thank you for your question. I have four different ways you could go about finding information on how certain types of music affect cognition and development in utero, and for newborns and infants.

Strategy 1:

The first thing you might want to try is using the PsycINFO database in DU Library's list of databases. I conducted a search using alternative keywords to the ones you provided above and that seemed to return some promising looking results. I used the phrases "musical stimulation" and "infan*" rather than "infant*" in the hopes that we might see some articles on infancy. I also tried "music" and "fetal learning" and got some interesting hits. Another phrase that might be useful is fetal development or variations on the word fetus. The screen shots below are what I found. I don't know if you are interested in prematurity as well, but several of these might be of use.

Another database you might have success in is the ERIC (ProQuest) database found in the library's list of education subject databases. I again tried to mix up the keywords you provided a bit by trying the term “cognitive” and it looks like there are quite a few relevant scholarly results in the field of education.

Strategy 3:

Thirdly, I might suggest heading to the Music Periodicals Database in the library’s databases.

Here you can search for similar combinations of the keywords above, but you’ll get results that are more specific to the field of music. Please feel free to utilize the filters to the left to limit results to certain time frames, subjects such as child development, or to view only full text materials. I limited my search to peer reviewed articles, but you are welcome to apply any limitations needed for the parameters of your research paper.

Strategy 4:

Finally, I do not want to leave out another helpful resource and I've found that, in terms of brain development, the PubMed database could be another useful place to look. In the screen shot below, I used terminology that may be utilized in the medical community to search for helpful materials. The phrase "neonatal development" in conjunction with "music" seems to have returned several applicable results.

I hope these suggestions will get you started successfully. Please feel free to let me know if you need any additional assistance in your information journey!

2. Question Submitted: I'm doing research comparing Sierra Leone and Liberia in the context of comparing provision of healthcare in regards to gender in a post-conflict setting. I'm looking primarily for journal articles and other scholarly works. Thank you. [Provide at least 3 strategies] Name: William

Hi William,

Thank you for your question. I have three different ways you could go about finding scholarly information on post-conflict healthcare and gender in West African countries such as Sierra Leone and Liberia.

Strategy 1:

The first thing you might want to try is performing a site search in Google for related materials at either worldbank.org or unesco.org. Using the search phrase "site:worldbank.org sierra leone health" I was able to find the resource in the screen grabs below. Further down in the abstract, we see that there is information specific to post-conflict health concerns. This is an open repository so the full book can be downloaded for free on the left side of the screen under the picture of the front cover. It looks like Chapter 3 is on Health and Equity and discusses gender issues such as maternal mortality. Another search for “site:worldbank.org liberia health” may return similar results for Liberia. Please keep in mind that the similar site searches like “site:unesco.org liberia health gender” or “site:unesco.org liberia health gender filetype:pdf” will return hits for similar materials but UNESCO is focused on humanitarian aspects whereas World Bank focuses on the economic aspects of international research. Both sites should be fruitful though.

Abstract

Sierra Leone is one of the poorest countries in Sub-Saharan Africa, with a gross national income per capita of US$510 in 2022. The country ranked near the bottom of all countries in the latest Human Development Index. Despite these low rankings, in the years since the end of the 10-year civil war in 2002, Sierra Leone has made notable progress. The return to peace and stability and the ample availability of fertile land have facilitated recovery and growth in agriculture. Urban ar-

"Essays on Equity, Health, and Education in Sierra Leone: Selected Challenges and Benefits" examines the evolution of poverty and human development outcomes since the end of the civil war and asks if the foundations for achieving shared prosperity and addressing persistent poverty in the country have been laid down through key policies in the education and health sectors.

Another search strategy you might find success with is heading to the Medline (WOS platform) health database. This can be found by using the subject dropdown in the DU databases and selecting the Health/Medicine option. Please play around with additional search terms here such as "west africa" or possibly "conflict" to refine/change your search.

Strategy 3:

Finally, I might suggest using a database such as Academic Search Complete which covers a broader range of journals. The screen shot below shows the keywords I utilized but please feel free to add or edit these. Please also feel free to refine your search's using the filters on the left side of the screen as well as the field constraint dropdowns to the right of the keyword boxes.

The first thing you might want to try is navigating to the DU library databases and using the subject dropdowns to search some Education databases. One that should work well for this topic is ERIC (ProQuest). An initial search for “development rural” returns 3,279 peer reviewed scholarly results.

However, if you are choosing to narrow the focus of your research, you can utilize the subject filters on the left side of the screen, about half way down, to focus on subtopics such as foreign countries, developing nations, rural urban differences, or many others. You can also narrow by education level or select from specific publication titles for journals such as Rural Educator, which holds 102 results for this search as of this writing.

Strategy 2:

Another strategy you might have success with is to head to Google and perform a site search for articles from unesco.org. UNESCO works to promote peace and international cooperation in sectors like education so they publish a lot of research. In the screen shots below, you can see that I used the search phrases “site:unesco.org education rural development” and “site:unesco.org education development rural 2024”. However, I believe that my third iteration where I used a filetype search for pdf reports with the phrase “site:unesco.org education development report filetype:pdf” might work the best because a Ctrl+F (find command) search reveals that the word “rural” appears 13 times in this document.

Strategy 3:

Finally, you could head to some of our economics or international studies databases like EconLit and use search terms like “education” and “rural” and “development” like we did in Strategy 1. However, one thing I always like to suggest if you want to refine the focus of your research topic is to head to Google Scholar and use natural language keywords to find articles with U. of Denver links. Please let me know if you need assistance adjusting your Google Scholar settings to link to the U. of Denver libraries. Here, in Google Scholar, you will also find too many results but the natural language search can lead you to content that helps you refine the subject terms you want to use in the DU databases later. For instance, I clicked on that first U. of Denver link in the screen shot below and found that additional terms like “policy”, “school”, or “community” may help you narrow your results.

The screenshot shows a Google Scholar search for 'role of education in rural development'. The search bar at the top shows the query and a magnifying glass icon. Below the search bar, it says 'Articles' and 'About 5,370,000 results (0.05 sec)'. On the left side, there are filters for 'Any time' (with options: Since 2024, Since 2023, Since 2020, Custom range...), 'Sort by relevance' (with 'Sort by date' as an option), 'Any type' (with 'Review articles' as an option), and checkboxes for 'include patents' and 'include citations'. There is also a 'Create alert' button. The search results are listed in the center. The first result is a PDF titled 'Education as a rural development strategy' by R. Gibbs, published in 2005, with a link to 'umn.edu'. The second result is an article titled 'Rural education as rural development: Understanding the rural school-community well-being linkage in a 21st-century policy context' by K.A. Schafft, published in 2016 in the 'Peabody Journal of Education', with a link to 'Taylor & Francis'. The third result is a book titled 'Education and rural development' by P. Foster, published in 2005, with a link to 'books.google.com'. The fourth result is a PDF titled 'The role of education for rural population transformation in Bangladesh' by M.R. Islam and A. Mia, published in 2007, with a link to 'researchgate.net'. Two yellow arrows point from the right side of the page to the links for the second and fourth results, with the text 'U. of Denver fulltext' next to each arrow.

I hope these suggestions will get you started successfully. Please feel free to let me know if you need any additional assistance in your information journey!

Amanda Clark

4. Question Submitted: I'm trying to find information about the following question: Identify multiple perspectives around your issue. What are people saying about it? Where are the conflicts, disputes, and discrepancies?

Our issue is unequal access to water, specifically in third world countries. I'm trying to find out what different organizations, political parties, etc. are doing about resolving this issue. I've searched the republican and democrat websites but found nothing helpful. I've tried searching google by organizations and didn't get much there either. [Provide at least 3 strategies] Name: Susan

Hi Susan,

Thank you for your question. I have three different ways you could go about finding different perspectives on unequal access to water in the least developed countries and what different political parties and organizations are doing about it.

Strategy 1:

My first suggestion might help you to have a bit more luck with Google. You can use a strategy called site searching or filetype searching in your attempt to get Google to give you what you're after. Start by gathering a list of human rights organizations concerned with access to water. Then select the organization of interest to you, I chose the United Nations Water site, and search only that site using a phrase like this, "site:unwater.org safe drinking water" or "site:unwater.org unequal access to water". These site searches force Google to return domain specific results. You can additionally search for documents within these sites by appending a filetype search to your search phrase like this, "site:unwater.org unequal access to water filetype:pdf" in order to bring pdf documents to the top of your results.

Hi Sara,

Thank you for your question. I have three or four different ways you could go about finding information on the press being blocked from taking pictures of caskets enroute to military bases and the freedom of speech issues therein.

Strategy 1:

Since your focus involves first amendment rights, I might suggest heading to the DU databases and using the subject dropdown to choose from one of the Journalism/Media Studies databases like Communication & Mass Media Complete. Strategies 3 & 4:

Finally, because I know the phrase “Dover Ban” and subsequently “Dover Test” from the previous search strategies, I would suggest either heading to one of our military databases (Military Database) or you can supplement with Google Scholar to look for additional articles we may have missed. Please let me know if you need assistance linking the U. of Denver or other libraries to Google Scholar so that you have full access to the article links on the right-hand side of the Google Scholar results list.

6. Question Submitted: Can you tell me where I can find an industry overview, if I know the SIC? (SIC 3356) I have looked at LexisNexis, S&P, etc., but have only found company descriptions, and not industry description. Thank you very much!! [Provide at least 3 strategies] Name: Meaghan

Hi Meaghan,

Thank you for your question. I have three different ways you could go about finding information on the industry associated with SIC 3356. In the late 90's the SIC system was replaced by the NAICS system. I pulled up the screen shot below so you could see the corresponding code is NAICS 331491.

SIC Code	SIC Description	NAICS Code	NAICS Description
3356	Nonferrous Rolling and Drawing, Nec	331491	Nonferrous Metal (except Copper and Aluminum) Rolling, Drawing, and Extruding

Strategy 1:

The first thing you might want to try is using a database such as Statista to find industry information. Here, I tried to use the NAICS code without success, but I did have success copying and pasting the new description of this industry into the search field. Here, we see that there are breakdowns by state but the second result is for the U.S. If you click on that second link, there are various charts, graphs, and statistics that might help you within the article.

Strategy 2:

Another database you might have success with is the ABI/INFORM Collection. In the screen shot below we see several results for NAICS 331491 even though I again needed to use the phrase "Nonferrous Metal (except Copper and Aluminum) Rolling, Drawing, and Extruding" to find results. I attempted to use the code in the initial search screen, but this was surprisingly unhelpful. Being flexible with our search terms seems to be helping though! Please also note that you can use the limiters on the left side of the screen to refine your results. Here, the "Reports" limiter was very helpful.

Strategy 3:

Finally, I might suggest heading to the BizMiner Database. Please be very patient with this database. It is slow to respond and initially appears as though it is not working with grayed out menu items and so forth. But hold steady and the page will eventually load! I've included detailed screen captures because this database can feel impossible but, with a little persistence, it is very valuable to your information goal. Please follow the yellow areas and be sure to contact me if you have trouble with it. I'd be happy to schedule a zoom and share my screen to show this process if the need arises. Oh, and the NAICS code did work better in this particular database!

In the last screen shot above, you should be able to gather any details about the industry you need by using these menu items. This is the screen that took the longest to load for me. I hope these suggestions will get you started successfully. Please feel free to let me know if you need any additional assistance in your information journey!

7. Question Submitted: I am researching counterterrorism policy, events, and legislation in Afghanistan since 1987. I am having troubles finding sources that deal directly with Afghan Government actions and not the US/International forces counterterrorism efforts. Name: Cassie [Provide at least 3 strategies]

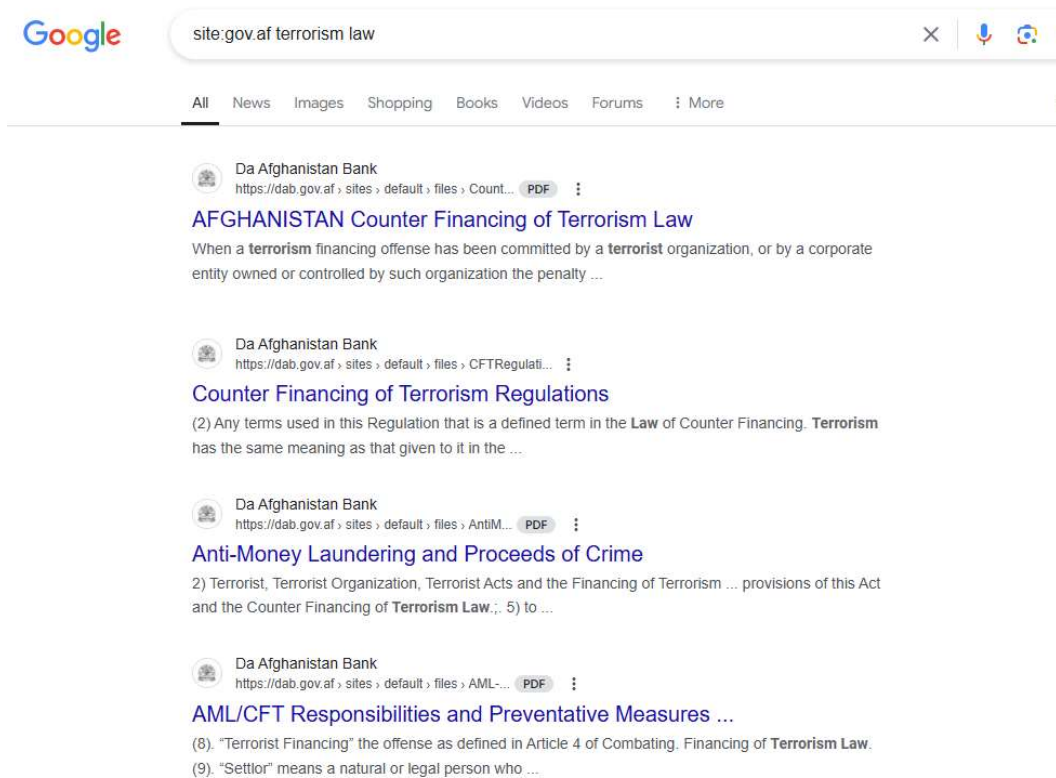

Hi Cassie,

Thank you for your question. I have three different ways you could go about finding information specific to Afghan government actions regarding counterterrorism policy.

Strategy 1:

The first thing you might want to try is using something called a site search on Google. After establishing that the country code for Afghanistan is .af, we can use Google to find a government domain in Afghanistan. Then we can use a search phrase like “site:gov.af counterterrorism” to look for domain specific information coming from the Afghan government. In the first screen shot below, we see that the Afghan government uses the phrase “terrorism law”. We can adapt our search strategy and search again with the new phrase as in the second screen shot below, revealing additional helpful materials.

Strategy 2:

Another strategy you might have success with is using one of DU libraries' broader databases such as Academic Search Complete. Here, I found the subject term dropdown to be useful with the phrase "afghan politics government". I do not usually suggest utilizing the Boolean NOT operator. However, in this case it was very helpful to redact any articles that were reflective of U.S. policy by removing those results.

8. Question Submitted: Hello, I am a senior at DU and I am interested in researching restaurant trends. When restaurants receive their peak business, what kind of restaurants succeed, some trends in the industry - basically information that the class Business Idea in DCB covers. If you could please direct me to where I could find this information- thank you. [Provide at least 3 strategies] Name: Justin

Hi Justin,

Thank you for your question. I have four different ways you could go about finding information on restaurant trends.

Strategy 1:

The first thing you might want to try is heading to the DU libraries business databases and searching for industry trends in a database such as IBIS World. The NAICS code for restaurants is 72251 but IBIS World breaks restaurants down by type so the results list reflects restaurants sub category codes such as 72211b for Single Location Full Service Restaurants. Using the “Industry at a Glance” link, you can use the menu on the left side to look deeper into categories such as “competitive forces.”

The screenshot displays the IBISWorld website interface. The top navigation bar includes the IBISWorld logo and dropdown menus for 'Industries', 'Products', and 'Resources'. Below the navigation bar, the breadcrumb trail shows the path: Home > United States > 72211B - Single Location. The main content area is titled 'Single Location' and lists the analyst 'Thi Le' with the location 'New York' and the publication date 'Oct 2024'. On the left sidebar, under the 'Industry Report' section, a list of chapters is shown. A yellow arrow points to the 'Competitive Forces' chapter. Below the chapters, there is a section for 'Related Industry Products' with links to 'State Industry Reports' and 'Segment Benchmarking'.

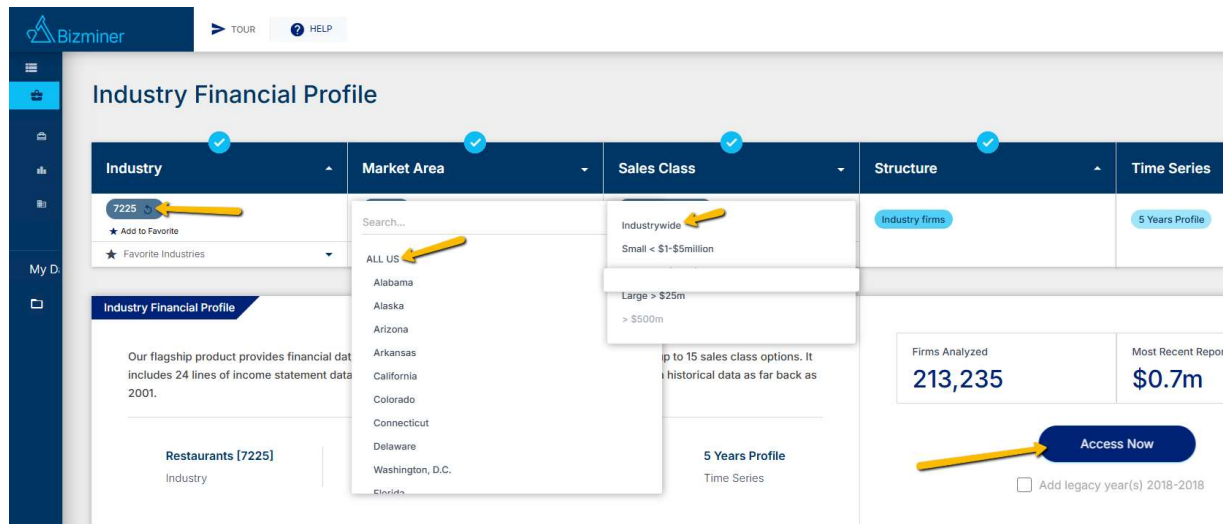

Strategy 2:

Another database you might have success with is Statista. A search for the term “restaurant” returned some promising looking results.

Strategy 3:

I might suggest heading to the BizMiner database. This database is a little particular and requires you to enter several parameters before searching for industry information. The yellow arrows below indicate I've selected 7225 as the NAICS code, ALL US for area, and Industrywide for Sales Class. Please select different options as needed for your research. Hitting "Access Now" will take you to a robust overview. Please be patient with this database as it is slow to load but worth the effort.

Strategy 4:

Finally, a great place to look at trends would be the ABI/INFORM Trade & Industry database.

Trend analyses can often be found in the reports and the trade journals found within this database. You can also use the filters along the left side of the results screen to refine your search results as seen in the second screen shot below. Feel free to adjust these as needed.

9. Question Submitted: Where can I find subject material regarding the use of computers in elementary school classrooms, and the pros and cons of this usage. [Provide at least 3 strategies] Name: Elaine

Hi Elaine,

Thank you for your question. I have three different ways you could go about finding information on the use of computers in elementary classrooms and the associated advantages and disadvantages.

Strategy 1:

The first thing you might want to try is exploring the DU databases under the Subject -> Education dropdown. A database like ERIC (ProQuest) would be a wonderful place to start. Using the search terms you provided was effective but also keep in mind that the filters along the left side of the screen are very useful in refining the focus of your research. Pros and cons can be found in articles that speak to "effectiveness," "engagement," "attitude," and so on.

Experts agree that computers and computing play an important role in education. Since the 1980s there has been a debate about gender as it relates to computers and education. However, results regarding gender differences concerning computer use in education are not consistent. In particular there is little work done in China on this issue. Therefore, th ... Show more

Strategy 3:

Finally, I might suggest heading to the Computer Science Database. Since the focus of this database is technology, it may help you to add some additional search terms. I added elementary in the screen shot below but you can explore other terms such as “K-5” or “primary school”. Playing with alternatives for pros and cons may also help. Here I used cost, benefit, and analysis. Also, please note that the top result below refers to education in Vietnam. If you are concerned with a particular geography, you may use the location limiter and other limiters on the left side of the screen again to narrow your results.

10. Question Submitted: I am writing a research paper on adoption on why adopted adults should have the rights to their sealed records. I have found numerous books on the subject but I am having a hard time narrowing down my search for journal articles. What type of wording do I need to put in for my journal article search and what type of formatting do I need to use. Thank you for your help. [Provide at least 3 strategies] Name: Meredith

Hi Meredith,

Thank you for your question. I have three different ways you could go about finding journal articles on adopted adults and their rights regarding unsealing their records.

Strategy 1:

The first thing you might want to try is using a legal database such as HeinOnline. It looks like laws regarding adoptee's rights are state specific. You may use the limiters on the left side of the screen to adjust your results to a particular state or location if need be. In terms of wording, I added the phrase "constitutional right" to this search and I started to get more applicable results. The results from this database are mainly going to be coming from the legal perspective but the second result below does address the psychology of the individual as well.

The screenshot shows the HeinOnline search interface. The search bar contains the text "adult adoptee constitutional right". Below the search bar, there are links for "Advanced Search", "Search Help", and "Citation Navigator". The left sidebar shows navigation options: "Databases", "Law Journal Library", and "LibGuide". The main search results area displays "1,306 results searching for (adult adoptee constitutional right) in Law Journal Library." The results are sorted by "Relevance". The first result is titled "The Adult Adoptee's Constitutional Right to Know His Origins [notes]" and is a note from the Southern California Law Review, Vol. 48, Issue 5 (May 1975), pp. 1196-1220, by Burke, Carolyn. The second result is titled "Access to Birth Records: An Adult Adoptee's Psychological Need and Constitutional Right [article]" and is from the New Hampshire Bar Journal, Vol. 21, Issue 3 (March 1980), pp. 102-120. The interface includes various filters on the left and action buttons like "Check All", "Uncheck All", "MyHein Options", and "Save/Email".

Strategy 2:

Another strategy you might utilize is to search a multidisciplinary database such as ProQuest Central. Here I had some degree of success using the search terms “adult adoptee,” “rights,” and “sealed records” but you can play around with different terms as well. I refined my search to only scholarly journal articles by using the limiters on the left side of the screen. You may also want to select peer reviewed and full text materials depending on the parameters of your research paper.

Strategy 3:

Finally, I might suggest heading to on the DU libraries psychology databases such as the Applied Social Sciences Index & Abstracts (ASSIA) database. Many of the articles here are available in full text. I've applied the scholarly journals filter in order to limit the results to journal findings.
